Harry Bosch's House from "Bosch"

<https://www.iamnotastalker.com/2019/01/04/harry-boschs-house-from-bosch/>

"Per Zillow, it is currently worth a whopping $2,130,000."

A lot of the pictures on the first three pages were taken from this Web site but the tour and reading about the house is worth a few minutes of your time.

"Harry's house is thanks to a detailed forum on MichaelConnelly.com. In the novels, Detective Bosch is said to live on Woodrow Wilson Drive in the Hollywood Hills, though his specific address varies from "next to" 7203 Woodrow Wilson in 2010's The Reversal to 8620 Woodrow Wilson in 2018's Dark Sacred Night."

Stalk It: Harry Bosch's house from the television series Bosch is located at 1870 Blue Heights Drive in Hollywood Hills West. The best views of the structure can be seen from the 1600 block of Viewmont Drive and the 8800 block of Hollywood Boulevard.

Red circle is about where the Bosch house is and the arrow is where the Hollywood sign is located.

The LAPD-Hollywood Station is located at 1358 Wilcox Ave and is off this map but just below the Hollywood Walk of Fame - shown below Whitley Heights just below Highway 101.

In Angels Flight “Bosch took Hollywood Boulevard to the 101 and coasted down the freeway in minimal traffic to downtown” (p. 6). This means he went from his Red circle home to the Hollywood Station and then headed downtown. This term for “downtown” if you look on a map it shows the area southeast of Hollywood a few miles (about seven) and is ‘Central Los Angeles.’ Just south of Elysian Park, Dodger Stadium, and Chinatown, is “downtown” Los Angeles and is boxed off (in my Atlas) by a 4 by 6 mile box.

The next two maps show this 4 x 6 box and then a focus on the area where City Hall, Civic Center, and the LAPD are located.

For orientation Hollywood and LA are not that big, but they are that close. West about 16 miles from the Civic Center is Santa Monica and the beach - and 16 miles south is Long Beach. Farther down the coast in Orange County is San Clemente - about 40 miles...lot of people and real estate in between – to say nothing of going east on highway 10 through Riverside and straight to Phoenix.

So, Bosch takes 101 (Hollywood freeway) to the 110 freeway and turns somewhere to get on 1st street to the LAPD – see end of red arrow above. The triangle below the north overpasses of 110 and 101 is the LA government buildings section. Not shown on this map but the east boundary is Alameda street with about 1st street being the southern boundary.

In this close up note the east/west 101 to the north of the triangle and Grand Ave which runs north/south is the west boundary.

The oblong red encompasses the LAPD which is the south west corner of 1st St and S Main St.

Note the Los Angeles City Hall (1928) above the PD as they are proud of this in the TV shots – an emblem also of the LAPD badge.

The yellow line shows The Angels Flight Railway: hence, the name of Connolly's number six Bosch book and where the TV series starts in Season 4 Episode 1.
